The perennial organ grinder with the usual repertoire of near-popular airs made his appearance on the street Saturday and spent the day luring pennies from little children and benevolent grown-ups. Looking the monkey was conspicuous by his absence and two black and white mice were the only occupants of the organ man's little wooden zoo.

"Amerno," the hypnotist, with many new and wonderful features, began a three days' engagement at the opera house to-night. Amerno, when here last season, made a very favorable impression and played to full houses. Besides his own part of the program, which includes an amusing exhibition of hypnotism, several reels of pictures are shown in connection with the vaudeville acts.

Work on the erection of the business block at the corner of Elm and Washington street, controlled by the Aldrich library trustees, was started this morning by W. E. Jackson of Montpelier, who has the contract to build the block. The foundation walls were put in last fall and the laying of the brick walls will be begun at once. The building will be three stories high and it is planned to have stores on the first floor and office rooms in the rest of the building.

"The Survival of the Fittest." The story of a circus. A show girl, with two lovers and a dancing bear. It begins in Italy with one lover cast off and the other accepted against the girl's will, and ends in New York, with the accepted lover thrown out and the old one accepted. There is a thrill when the girl is attacked by lions, from which she is bravely rescued by her former lover. And then all is peace and happiness with them. It's at the Dreamland.

The following persons were registered at the hotel Otis yesterday: C. B. Carpenter, Bellows Falls; C. E. Grossarth, F. W. Currier, Burlington; G. F. Brown, C. W. One of the acts that comes to the Pavilion to-day is one of the best known of its kind before the vaudeville public. We refer to Blamplin & Hehr, known as the champion singers of vaudeville. This act offers one of the most pleasing high-class singing acts to be heard in the vaudeville theatres throughout the country. Both members of the act are well-known opera singers, who have left the operatic stage and entered the vaudeville ranks; one a tenor, the other a beautiful soprano. Their voices blend perfectly. Their act consists of solos and duets. One number, "The Quaker," gives the act a delightful bit of comedy.

An attempt to enter the house at 35 Keith avenue occupied by E. A. Prindle Saturday night shortly before 12 o'clock was frustrated only by the appearance of Mr. Prindle, who was aroused by his daughter before the marauders had gained much headway. The would-be thieves, if such they were, tried to gain an entrance through a window on the piazza. Failing in this, they next attempted to force the door when Mr. Prindle appeared on the scene and they betook themselves off. Two suspicious looking men were seen about the place earlier in the night and it is reported that they hung about the premises until 3 o'clock Sunday morning. Mr. Prindle is of the opinion that the men were intoxicated and attaches little significance to their inexperienced attempts at burglarizing the house. The matter was not reported to the police.
